SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Two thirds of the papers of Stephen Benedict cover the 1952 campaign, and the other third relate to his two years in the Eisenhower Administration. During the campaign he served as the assistant to Dr. Gabriel Hauge, Research Director for Citizens for Eisenhower, and he traveled extensively on the campaign train where he collected much of this material. In addition to speech drafts and press release copies of speeches, Benedict's campaign files include messages between the campaign train and campaign headquarters in New York, reports from advance men, background information on upcoming towns and cities on the schedule, notes, outlines, memos and notes on campaign strategy, and schedules. There are several folders of material on Senator Robert A. Taft, a file on Adlai Stevenson, and a sizeable quantity of anti-Eisenhower smear materials.

Benedict worked in the Eisenhower White House from 1953 to 1955. He served first as assistant to Dr. Gabriel Hauge, the Administrative Assistant to the President for Economic Affairs and next as Assistant White House Staff Secretary. His files for this period contain considerable documentation on economic matters, including agriculture, trade, tariffs, taxes, and the Commission on Foreign Economic Policy. Documentation on presidential telecasts in 1953-54, plus materials on several presidential speeches are also found in this series.

In 1960 Mr. Benedict participated in a presidential transition study undertaken by the Brookings Institution. This collection contains notes of interviews with current and former White House staffers and other government officials, and memoranda or reports on different aspects of the transition.

This collection contains unique documentation from the campaign train which does not exist elsewhere. Some of the items were reportedly rescued from waste baskets on the train. The files on presidential telecasts and the 1960 presidential transition are also significant additions to the Library's documentation on the Eisenhower Presidency.
