77th INFANTRY DIVISION, 1942-1946

9,800 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1073-1085

The “Statue of Liberty Division” participated in the Guam operation of the Western Pacific campaign, the Leyte operation of the Southern Philippines campaign, and the Kerama Retto, Keise Shima, Ie Shima, and Okinawa operations of the Ryukyus campaign. The Division also served five months on occupation duty in Japan from October 1945 to March 1946.

The series contains operation reports, after action reports, operation plans, periodic reports, journals, message files, summaries, histories, regulations, photographs, scrapbooks, maps and map overlays. The material covers the period from early 1942 to early 1946, with the bulk covering the year from mid-1944 to mid-1945. The series is organized into seven subseries according to the Classification Scheme of the Historical Records Section, Departmental Records Branch with general, historical, and operational reports, G-1 (personnel) reports, G-2 (intelligence) reports, G-3 (operations and training) reports, G-4 (logistics) reports, and staff section reports.

The series includes reports on training operations, chemical warfare activities, operation reports and plans on the three main engagements of the Division – Guam, Leyte, and the Ryukyus, as well as various Division reports on occupation duty in Japan. Of particular interest are reports on psychological warfare, Japanese defensive organization, Japanese artillery tactics, interrogation of Japanese POWs, and brief histories of Japanese infantry units encountered on Okinawa, all located in G-2 reports and summaries (subseries III).

The "Lightning Division" was activated at Camp Butner, North Carolina August 15, 1942. The Division participated in the Carolina and Tennessee maneuvers in 1943-1944 before shipping overseas on October 14, 1944. After further training in England and preparatory work in France, Belgium and Germany, the Division underwent its first combat trial in December, 1944. During the remainder of the war in Europe, the Division participated in the Ardennes, the Rhineland, and Central Europe campaigns. The occupation period found the Division stationed near Marburg, Germany until their inactivation in Europe on May 22, 1946.

This series contains histories, journals, after action reports, special reports, map overlays, and artistic renditions of the major battle areas. Most of the material covers the period of December 1944 through the occupation period. The material is arranged into five subseries according to the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

The activities of the G-2 and G-3 sections of the 78th Division are represented here. There is also a fairly comprehensive history of the Division and its organic units. The material of special interest is in the areas of history of the units and the G-2 reports. Within the history of the Division and the organic units are hand-drawn covers to reports. Within the G-2 records are surrender terms to key German staff officers, interrogation of POWs, special reports on the werewolf activities, sabotage, and booby traps such as the pocket knife pistol. The Division published several books as well as a monthly newsletter.

Boxes 1096-1105

The "Cross of Lorraine" Division returned to activation on June 15, 1942, at Camp Pickett, Virginia. After nearly two years of training at Camp Blanding, Florida, Second Army Maneuvers in Tennessee, California-Arizona Maneuver area, and finally to Camp Phillips, Kansas, they shipped out from Boston on April 7, 1944. Further training in the United Kingdom readied the 79th Infantry Division for its first landing at Utah Beach, Normandy, June 12-14, 1944. They entered combat on June 19, 1944, south of Cherbourg. In 248 days of actual combat the Division fought in campaigns in Normandy, Northern France, the Rhineland, and Central Europe. They went on occupational duty in April, 1945 in Dortmund, Sudetenland, and Bavaria until their return to the United States and deactivation on Dec. 11, 1945, at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey.

This series contains histories, biographies, commendations, press clippings, intelligence reports, intelligence newsletters, journals, operations reports, movement orders, maps, overlays, memos, rosters, photographs, staff section reports, and a special report titled "The Rhine River Crossing". The series covers a period from the World War I era (a history), to the Division's re-activation and organization in June 1942 up to the occupation phase in late 1945. The material is organized into six subseries according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

The activity of most elements of the 79th Division's organizational structure is represented in this series. The areas of special interest are the 79th Division history, the G-2 reports, and the special report on the Rhine River Crossing.

The history is a very detailed account of the Division, from its World War I organization through the occupational period in 1945. Speeches given by Maj. Gen. I. T. Wyche, Commander, 79th Infantry Division are also included. The G-2 reports contain information pertaining to processing POWs, interrogation of Nazis, humorous stories, and special reports on subjects such as Hitler, his life, and German Central Staff, key personnel in the Nazi regime, and a rundown on key Russian personnel.

"The Rhine River Crossing" is a special report put together with input from all organizational sections plus added reports from the engineers and signal battalions. There are numerous photographs, drawings, maps, overlays, and statistical data which accompany this report. It had a large distribution, including the Army and Navy War colleges.

The Division also published a combat history in 1946 and a short history called The Story of the 79th.

- Sept. 12-Oct. 24, 1944 The Division moved through the Franco-Belgian frontier of St. Amand, Charmes, Moselle River, Meurthe River, Foret du Parroy, and Embermenil.
- Nov. 13-Dec. 20, 1944 After resting and training in Luneville, the Division resumed an offensive attack which was countered by intense enemy resistance in the Migne-ville-Montigny area. They pushed through the Vezouse River, Moder River, Haguenau, and into the Siegfried Line.
- Dec. 20, 1944-Jan. 2, 1945 The Division held a defensive line at the Lauter River and then withdrew to the Maginot Line.
- January 8-19, 1945 The 79th withstood the German attack at Hatten and Rittershoffen in an 11-day battle before with-drawing to the south of Haguenau on the Moder River.
- Mar. 24-Apr. 13, 1945 After resting in February and March, the Division crossed the Rhine, drove across the Rhine-Herne Canal, secured the north bank of the Ruhr and took part in the clearing of the Ruhr pocket.
- April-November, 1945 After 248 days in combat the Division went on occupation duty in Dortmund, Sudetenland, and Bavarian areas.
- December, 1945 The Division returned to the United States.
- December 11, 1945 The Division was deactivated at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey.

80th INFANTRY DIVISION, 1942-1945

7,500 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1106-1117

The "Blue Ridge Division" was activated in 1942. After an extensive series of training exercises in Tennessee and Arizona, the Division was sent to Europe where it participated in the Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe campaigns. After the war it served on occupation duty at numerous locations in Austria, Czechoslovakia, and Germany before returning to the U.S. in January 1946.

The series contains histories, after action reports, periodic reports, journals, memos, bulletins, summaries, and map overlays. The material covers the period from 1942 to 1945, and has been separated into two subseries.

The first subseries, housed in boxes 1106-1111, relates to the organization of the Division and its activities in World War II. Documents in this subseries include histories, after action reports, periodic reports, journals bulletins, and summaries. This material is arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

The second subseries consists relates solely to the Division's training maneuvers in the United States during 1943 and 1944. Documents in the subseries include map overlays, reports, orders, and memos concerning training maneuvers and field exercises performed by the 80th Infantry Division in Tennessee and Arizona and arranged chronologically. Many of the overlays are torn and faded and badly wrinkled and use and reproduction of these items may be limited due to preservation concerns. In addition to purely operational records, the second subseries also contains a small amount of financial records from the Division Field Exchange. This was a type of supply depot which furnished cigarettes and other luxuries to the troops while they were on maneuvers. Among other items of interest are situation reports to Division headquarters describing events in the field, and information on the transportation of the troops to the maneuver areas.

83rd INFANTRY DIVISION, 1942-1946

3,000 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1129-1132

The “Thunderbolt Division” entered combat by landing on Omaha Beach (Normandy) twelve days after D-Day. For the remainder of the war the Division participated in numerous operations and engagements of the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace, and Central Europe campaigns. The Division claims to have advanced to within 54 miles of Berlin, the nearest point reached by an American unit.

The series contains histories, after action reports, operation reports, order of battle notes, lists, rosters, maps, map overlays, charts, graphs, memoranda, correspondence, commendations, and photographs. The material covers the period from August 1944 to February 1946, with the bulk covering the period from mid-1944 to mid-1945. The material is organized into four subseries according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch, and chronologically there under.

The bulk of the materials in this series consist of division-level after action reports, which also contain reports from the various staff sections and organizational components of the Division. Therefore, some G-3 and G-4 reports may be found in after action reports even though there is no material from these sections organized into separate subseries. Although the amount of G-2 material is small, it does contain interrogation reports of German POWs and background reports on the German units faced by the Division. Other materials of interest include reports on the concentration camp near Langenstein and the V-1 factory near Eschershausen, reports on the rehabilitation of displaced persons (primarily Jews) following the war, and reports on the annual disease and accident rates in the Division for the latter part of 1945.

The "Custer Division" participated in the operations of the Rome-Arno, North Apennines, and Po Valley campaigns. The 85th Infantry Division first entered combat near Minturno on the Gustav Line in April 1944, and pushed its way northward past the Po River by late April 1945.

The series contains staff meeting minutes, unit citation materials, periodic reports, plans, reports of operations, monthly staff reports, weekly special staff reports, and weekly reports. The bulk of the material deals with April 1944 to July 1945. There is very little material related to the training and pre-combat activities of the 85th Infantry Division. The material is organized into three subseries according to the classification system of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

General materials, including unit citation materials, staff meeting minutes, and the coat of arms of two infantry regiments, make up only about 17 percent of the series and G-3 Periodic Reports contribute approximately 8 percent. The remaining 75 percent of this series is comprised of G-4 reports. This breakdown is somewhat misleading, however, in that many of the staff section reports are included in the G-4 subseries.

Of particular interest in this series are the unit citation materials, which include detailed accounts of unit activities, and some of the G-4 Journals, which list incidents, messages, and orders given to the 85th Infantry Division.

A paperback history of the 85th Infantry Division entitled Minturno to the Apennines is available in the book collection. It covers the Division's history from 1942 to November 1944.

CHRONOLOGY

85th Infantry Division

- May 15, 1942 The 85th Infantry division was activated at Camp Shelby, Mississippi.
- December 1943 The Division sailed for North Africa.
- January 1944 The Division arrived at Casablanca, French Morocco, and received amphibious training at Fort aux Poules, Algeria.
- February-March 1944 The division left for Naples and moved to the front.
- April 1944 The Division was committed to action north of the Garigliano River and held defensive positions near Minturno facing the Gustav Line.
- May 11-29, 1944 The division broke thru the Gustav Line, took Solacciano, Castellonorato, Formia, and Itri, mopped up the Gaeta Peninsula, and opened the road to the Anzio beachhead.
- May 31-June 10, 1944 The Division cleared the Lorian sector, advanced thru San Cesareo, Monte Campatri, and Frascati, entered Rome, and advanced as far north as Viterbo.
- June 10-August 1944 The Division participated in rehabilitation and training in an area south of Rome.
- August 15-26, 1944 The Division occupied defensive positions on the Arno River from Bellosguardo on the east to Capanne on the west.
- September 1944 The Division attacked the German mountain defenses in the Gothic Line, broke through and took Altuzzo and Firenzuola, and advanced to La Martina.
- October 1-26, 1944 The Division advanced from Tre Poggioli to Mt. Mezzano and the Po River Valley
- Oct. 27-Nov. 22, 1944 The Division held defensive positions near Mezzano.
- Nov 23, 1944-Jan 5, 1945 The Division was scheduled for rest and rehabilitation.
- Jan. 6-March 13, 1945 The Division participated in defensive and patrolling duties.
- March 13-April 14, 1945 The Division pushed through the Lucca and Pistoia and entered the Po Valley.
- April 23-24, 1945 The Division crossed the Panaro and Po Rivers.
- April 24-May 1, 1945 The Division rounded up remnants of the Germany Army.
- May 2, 1945 The Division accepted the mass surrender of Germans in Belluno-Agordo area.
- August 25, 1945 The Division returned to the U.S. and was inactivated.

The "Blackhawk Division" was activated in December 1942, but did not arrive in Europe until March 1945. The Division saw about a month of combat and participated in a number of engagements of the Central Europe campaign. The Division was involved in Ruhr "pocket fighting", captured Eichstatt, secured a bridge over the Amper Canal, and moved east to Salzburg in the last days of the war.

This series contains histories, after action reports, periodic reports, biographical sketches, overlays, maps, field orders, training memos and guides, operations memoranda, station lists, special orders, and miscellaneous memos and reports. The material is organized into six subseries according to the classification system of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

Of special interest in this series are the journals of the Division Artillery Section for April 1945 and the unit histories and G-2 periodic reports for September 1945 to December 1946. The materials on the occupation of the Philippines, especially for the first half of 1946, contain many interesting accounts of groups of Japanese soldiers either holding out in the jungle or mountains or straggling in to surrender and the efforts of the U. S. and Filipino troops to round them up.

The "Blue Devil Division" was activated in July 1942, but was not sent overseas until December 1943. After intensive training in Algeria, the Division was sent to Italy where it participated in the Rome-Arno, North Apennines and Po Valley campaigns. After the war it was on security duty for two years in Northeast Italy near the Yugoslavian border.

This series contains narrative histories, periodic reports, news releases, journals and correspondence. Most of the material covers the period from 1944 to 1945 when the Division was in actual combat. However, a few records cover the Division's activities while on security duty after the war. The material is arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

Over half of the series consists of G-1, G-2 and G-4 reports. The G-1 material covers the period when the Division was on security duty, while most of the G-2 and G-4 material covers the period of actual combat. Only a few G-2 reports are concerned with the security duty, but these contain interesting information on Communist activities along the Italian-Yugoslavian border. The rest of the series contains narrative histories which describes the general activities of the Division, and a few staff section reports. At the end of the series are filed two military attaché reports and some information on the organizing and training of infantry divisions. These appear to be reference material kept by the Division commander.

The 89th Infantry Division, or "Rolling W," was activated at Camp Carson, Colorado in July 1942. Major General William H Gill was the commanding officer during the initial training phase. Brigadier General Thomas D. Finley succeeded Gill as division commander in February 1943 and eventually led the division into combat. After extensive training in the U. S. the Division departed for France in January 1945. On March 9 the Division crossed the Sauer River, and on March 12, 1945 it began combat operations. The Division advanced across the Moselle River and crossed the Rhine on March 26. In early April they participated in the liberation of the German concentration camp at Ohrdruf. Generals Eisenhower and Patton toured this camp. In mid-April the division discovered underground aircraft assembly plants in the Kahla area. VE Day found the division positioned in the Zwickau area. The Division spent a few weeks in Germany on occupation duty and then returned to France to process other troops returning to the states. In September 1945 the 89th Infantry Division returned to the United States and was inactivated in December 1945.

The series contains after action reports, operation reports, periodic reports, daily summaries, map overlays, and miscellaneous items. Most of the materials cover the period from January to September 1945 when the division was in the European Theater. The records document the operations of the 89th Infantry Division in Germany in March and April 1945. The Division was involved in liberating the concentration camp at Ohrdruf and locating underground airplane assembly plants in the Kahla area.

2,400 pages (approximate)
Boxes 1156-1158

The “Tough ‘Ombres Division” entered combat during World War II when it landed on Utah Beach in Normandy on D-Day. For the remainder of the war the Division participated in numerous operations and engagements of the Normandy, Northern France, Ardennes-Alsace, Rhineland, and Central Europe campaigns.

The series contains operation reports, after action reports, inspection reports, journals, letters, telegrams, messages, memoranda, requisitions, directives, regulations, contracts, charts, field orders, rosters, maps, map overlays, photographs, and biographical sketches. The material covers the period from mid-1942 to mid-1945 with the bulk covering the period from mid-1944 to mid-1945. The series is not organized into subseries but the material is arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

G-3 journals (Sept. 1944-May 1945) comprise the largest segment of the series. There are few historical reports, however press clippings provide good coverage of the Division’s training period in Texas (July 1942-August 1943). Among the varied items within the series are reports for changes in the Division’s table of organization and equipment (June 1945), G-4 supply records for late 1943, S.O.P. reports (issued by the War Department) for Division operations during blackouts, and biographical sketches of key Division personnel.

The "Powder River Division" did not become actively involved in the war until mid-1944. Despite its late entry into the war the Division participated in numerous operations and engagements of the Rome-Arno, North Apennines, and Po Valley campaigns in Italy.

The series contains operation plans, operation reports, periodic reports, intelligence summaries, histories, correspondence, lists, journals, charts, general orders, field orders, commendations, map overlays, training memoranda, insignia, press clippings, photographs, and biographical sketches. Though the material primarily covers the period from mid-1942 to mid-1945, with the bulk covering 1945 and late 1944, historical reports and photographs from the World War I period are also included. The material is organized into five subseries according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

The records within this series are far from complete. The bulk of the material consists of General Orders, G-2 Periodic Reports, and G-3 Periodic Reports. Among the varied items within the series are 1943-1944 copies of the Camp Adair Sentry, the 91st Div. newspaper while training in Oregon; information regarding the insignias of various organic components of the 91st; historical sketches of the 316th Engineers during World War I; songs of the 91st Division; and biographical sketches of key Division personnel.

The "Buffalo Division" was activated on October 15, 1942 at Fort McClellan, Alabama. They participated in the Texas-Louisiana Maneuvers in 1943 and continued training at Fort Huachuca, Arizona in 1944. On September 22, 1944, the Division shipped out for Italy. The Division was splintered into elements throughout its tour of duty in the North Apennines and Po Valley campaigns. Most of the combat experience came in the Serchio and Ligurian Coastal Sectors. After the May 2, 1945 surrender in Italy, the Division remained on duty until its return stateside on November 26 and inactivation on November 28, 1945.

This series contains a unit history, G-2 and G-3 periodic reports and journals, rosters, memos, training reports, photographs, maps, a blueprint of Ft. Huachuca, and press clippings. The material is organized into five subseries according to the Departmental Records Branch and chronology there under.

This unit is unique in that it is one of the two predominantly black divisions in the then segregated army. Documentation of the activation and history of the unit while stateside is fairly complete. Other items of interest can be found in the G-2 and G-3 journals, as well as the CIC files. Special reports on sabotage are of note because of the great number of partisans who worked for and against the allies in this area. The interrogation and confessions of enemy agents are also interesting. A booklet called With the 92nd Infantry Division was published in 1946.

CHRONOLOGY

Known as the "Blue Helmet" Division, the 93rd Infantry Division was the first African-American division organized for World War II. It was activated and trained at Fort Huachuca, Arizona from 1942 to January 1944. The unit was divided up among the Dutch New Guinea Islands, Northern Solomon Islands, and the Bismark Archipelago Admiralty Islands during its tour of duty. Although the bulk of the division was engaged in training, labor, and security duties, the combat elements managed to do a great deal of patrolling throughout the islands.

The series contains histories, reports, correspondence, and press clippings. The material is not organized into subseries, but is arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

This series contains only a minor segment on the Division's activities during World War II. The areas of most interest are in the periodic reports. The bulk of the material is in the G-2 and G-3 periodic reports. The G-2 reports contain propaganda leaflets dropped to the enemy, as well as interrogation reports of POWs, and special reports. The unique attribute of this collection is the insignia design proposals. There are many original drawings for unit patches which were selected in 1942.

The "Iroquois Division" was the only infantry division that did not see combat during World War II. The Division was activated on 15 September 1942 and participated in training maneuvers in Tennessee in 1943. On 19 April 1944 the Division arrived in Hawaii where it remained on security duty until the end of the war in the Pacific. In mid- August 1945 the Division left for occupation duty in Japan, arriving on 27 September 1945. It remained on occupation duty until 16 February 1946 when it was inactivated.

The series contains histories, operations reports, and periodic reports. Most of the material covers the period from 1945 to 1946 when the Division was on occupation duty in Japan. The records are arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

There is very little material in this series dated prior to the Division's occupation duty. Most of the early material consists of brief histories of various staff sections. Of particular interest is a technical report on the freedrop method of supplying troops, which was practiced by the Division while in Hawaii in 1944.

The activities of the Division while on occupation duty are well documented. There are a large number of operations reports which give information on the day-to-day activities of the Division and its staff sections. There is also good coverage of special services, including information on shows, restaurants, parks, stores, transportation and recreational facilities in the occupied areas.

The "Checkerboard Division" was activated in November 1942 and arrived in Europe in October 1944. For the remainder of the war it participated in various battles and engagements in the Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe campaigns. During the Ardennes-Alsace campaign, the Division played a role in blunting the German offensive during the Battle of the Bulge.

The series contains histories, journals, orders, periodic reports, and after action reports. The bulk of the material covers the period from November 1944 to May 1945 when the Division was engaged in combat. However, several historical reports cover the early history of the Division from the time of its activation. The material is arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

Of particular interest within the series are the G-2 Periodic Reports. These reports contain numerous interviews of German prisoners and information on noted German personalities and organizations. There is also a special report on the activities of the Division during the Battle of the Bulge. A large number of photographs were found with the records. These have been transferred to the Audiovisual Collection of the Eisenhower Library.

The "Century Division" was activated at Fort Jackson, South Carolina in November 1942, but did not see combat until November 1, 1944 when it entered St. Remy, France. The Division participated in the Ardennes-Alsace, Rhineland, and Central Europe campaigns.

The series primarily consists of G-2 and G-3 periodic reports and historical reports of component units for 1945. Among the varied items within the series are materials pertaining to unit citations, photographs, and newspaper clippings. Photographs were transferred to the audiovisual department. The material is not organized into subseries but is organized according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

The "Cactus Division," which was activated in late 1942, did not enter combat until November 1944 when it relieved the 3rd Division at Chevry. After participating in both the Rhineland and the Central Europe campaigns, the Division occupied the Austrian Tyrol until September 1945.

The series contains histories, narrative histories, unit histories, periodic reports, journals, awards, commendations, lists, rosters, general orders, administrative orders, operations instructions, intelligence bulletins, terrain studies, biographies, correspondence, photographs, press clippings, maps and map overlays. The series covers the period from 1943 to 1945 with the bulk of the material covering the period from late 1944 to mid -1945. The material is organized into seven subseries according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

Each of the narrative histories contained within the general historical and operations reports include general and staff section reports, casualty lists, and rosters of key personnel. The subseries also contains a detailed history of the Division from its initial organization as a reserve unit through activation and training. Another account of the Division's training period can be found in the maneuver report (in G-4 subseries). This report consists of daily reports from various subseries, including staff section reports, of the Division's first maneuvers in Leesville, Louisiana.

The miscellaneous G-5 reports contain journals of the daily occupation of Germany and Austria as well as prisoner of war camp rosters. In addition to summaries of prisoner of war interrogations, and analyses of the enemy situation, the G-2 reports include translations of captured German documents, histories of enemy divisions, and biographies of German leaders.

Of particular interest is the history of the occupation of Austria (in G-5 subseries) which contains plans for the repatriation of German refugees in Austria, reports on civilian administration, and a "de-Nazifying" program for Austrian natives. Also included in this report is a detailed economic survey of the local countryside. Taken by individual towns, the survey inventories the agricultural productivity and livestock of the area, and cites proposals to assist in agricultural production.

The largest segment of material within the series consists of staff section reports from 1943 to 1945 with the 328th Engineer Combat Battalion, the 410th Infantry Regiment and the 411th Infantry Regiment being well represented. The activities of the 410th Infantry Regiment in the attack on Schillersdorf and the participation of the 1st Battalion of the 411th Infantry Regiment in the assault on the Siefried Line are well covered in the report on small unit operations in the general historical and operations reports.

The "Timberwolf Division" was activated in September 1942 and spent several months in training at Camp Adair, Oregon. In September 1944 it landed in France and spent the rest of the war fighting in the Northern France, Rhineland, and Central Europe campaigns.

The series contains histories, periodic reports, journals, orders, and correspondence. The bulk of the material covers the period from October 1944 to May 1945 when the Division was in actual combat, however, a significant amount concerns the early training activities of the Division at Camp Adair. The records are organized into four subseries according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under.

Most of the series consists of G-2 and G-3 journals and reports. These provide an excellent day-by-day account of the operations of the Division and include information on contact with the Russian army. There are a large number of narrative histories which summarize the activities of the various staff sections of the Division. The most completely documented staff section is the Artillery, which includes both narrative histories and journals. The administration of the Division at Camp Adair, Oregon is well documented by the General Historical and Operational Reports.

The “Golden Lion Division” was activated on March 15, 1943. After landing in France in December 1944, it participated in the Northern France, Ardennes-Alsace, and Rhineland campaigns. The Division suffered great losses during the German offensive in the Battle of the Bulge.

This series consists of histories, orders, after action reports, journals, and newspaper clippings. The bulk of the records date from December 1944 to September 1945 when the Division was active in Europe. These have been arranged according to the classification scheme of the Departmental Records Branch and chronologically there under. The newspaper clippings pertain solely to the Division’s training activities in the United States and have been arranged in roughly chronological order at the end of the series.

The Operations of the 106th Division are poorly documented. The most detailed accounts can be found in the G-3 periodic reports and journals. Since the earliest of these are dated January 1945, there is no information on the Division’s activities during the Battle of the Bulge. The G-5 periodic reports contain interesting information on relations with the civilian population of occupied territories, but provide little or no details of military operations.
